Jogger falls in pot-hole

A WOMAN jogger's leg broke when her foot went down a pot-hole.

The accident happened at 8.30pm last night at Horsted Keynes, near Haywards Heath, while the woman, in her mid-twenties, was out running with friends.

She was airlifted by the Sussex Police helicopter to the Princess Royal Hospital where her condition was said to be satisfactory.

RUN 900

Well they came from far and wide for this one – New Zealand, the States, East Grinstead and Chichester! Hardly fair as kiwiland is now prominent at every run, but at least the others represented distant hash chapters and were welcomed accordingly.

Advance publicity confused all and sundry as Bouncer's 1/2 hourly timetable threw the regulars who thought an early start was required. All thoughts of registration for the curry got left behind as the rain continued to wash out the trail, which eventually got laid courtesy of Simon Brown's bedsheet just one hour before the off.

Early versions of the run were abandoned as one route had the hares leaping for cover when a pack of rabid dobermen(?) picked up the scent, and another when one hare severed an artery trying to recut a blocked off footpath by bouncing (clue there) up and down on the barbed wire. The final route was some 1.5 miles shorter but the sudden onset of winter and the weather contributed to the run itself having to be cut short.

How we lost Bob and Tony before the beer stop is a mystery and despite their claim that they got lost at the check round the cornfield, remains so, as there was no check there! The world's largest check made a good point to stop as the rain had by now given up. As it was now 9:00pm on our 9:00th run, and all hashes are supposed to end by that time the hash was declared closed leaving a mad 1/2 mile sprint back to the Royal George for a(nother) beer.

Helen Luck fell victim of Bouncers latest scheme but handled hash currency with great skill as drinks tokens started flying around ready for the meal. Down-downs were deferred until after the meal when Bouncer received a mug for his 100th on-on (and er.. 90th run!), Rodger Rabbit for being a kiwi (birdbunny?) and Helen for her elaborate attempt to get a free chopper ride and then being so drugged up she didn't even stay awake through it.

The meal itself was pronounced a great success thanks to the efforts of our hosts and also for the Harveys they brought in especially for the occasion. I am assured that the souvenir t-shirts will be ready before our 1000th run so I guess that counts. Who knows, we may even see Bouncers raffle before then too!

It is rumoured that new weight and measures legislation will allow a shortfall of 5% of any product against its declared weight or contents. Possible consequences of this are:

- There won't be a last Rolo
- Hundreds and Thousands become lots
- Polos have bigger holes
- All Gold chocolates will be electro plated
- A Big Mac will become a Pac-a-mac

This of course will bring all goods in line with the current position on beer measures! After this government backed down on legislation to give the British public a full pint for their money the recommendations from the brewers is to give a pint with only 95% liquid. This makes a mockery of the breweries lobbying Parliament to reduce the tax on beer for they have introduced their own tax of 5 to 10p per pint.

Whatever happens there will always be one exception, Pepperami. This product is 100% meat, plus sugar, salt, spices, flavour enhancers, preservatives and sodium nitrates.

The brewery industry insists on calling the water it uses for making beer 'liquor.' The sewage industry uses the same terms – the water leaving a sewage works is called the 'mixed liquor.' Perhaps this explains the subtle taste of some keg beers and lagers!

Twas one evening in November,
I very well remember,
I was walking down the road in drunken
pride,
Then my legs felt all a'flutter,
so I sat down in the gutter
and a pig came up and sat down by my side.

I was sitting in the gutter,
thinking thoughts I could not utter,
when a lady passing by was heard to say,

"You can tell a man who boozes,
by the company he chooses."
and the pig got up and walked away.

PUB RENAMING GAME

Here are some suggestions of new names for old pubs.
If you have any others to contribute, pass to trashmaster.

OLD NAME

The Bird in Hand
The Fox & Hounds
The Castle
The Red Cow
The Blue Boar
The Cock Inn

NEW NAME

The Back of the Cortina
The Activist and Aniseed
The Equity Trap
The Chernobyl Beef
The John Major
The Politicians Folly

Legless? If only that was all. A report from Poland tells of two drunken friends and a game of dare. It resulted in one of them losing his head, which had something to do with the axe they were using.

Sam Whitbread, the millionaire brewer, is under investigation by police over allegations that badgers have been snared on his Bedfordshire estate. The case will carefully be followed by the local branch of the Wildlife Trust, which opposes trapping, for Whitbread is their patron.

What's the difference between Cadburys and Whitbread? One makes a pint and a half into a quart and the other makes damn fine chocolate.
