DOWNNS DOWNNS DEEPER AND DOWNNS

Well the relay is here again on 20th May. By now I would hope that everyone who would like to take part has expressed an interest but just in case you haven't, Phil Mutton is your first port of call although he'll probably feed you out to another team! You may be aware that the Gurkhas organise the 100 kilometre team run on the South Downs way that replaced the original solo run. Seems they have better things to do than join in the Brighton hash event, as reported on the back page!

Thanks to all the many contributors this issue – Don, Pete, Dave etc. It's good to know that from time-to-time it's not just a one-man show. I mean Ivan can't be expected to supply all the jokes the whole time!

I'm afraid the caption competition opposite (page three) just couldn't wait until Christmas. Angel's response (probably) – You can tell a gentleman as he takes his teeth out before getting stuck in!

Should have had a run for this.....

On May 4th 2006, at two minutes and three seconds after 1:00 in the morning, the time and date will be 01:02:03 04/05/06. The time date will read 1-2-3-4-5-6 and that'll never happen again, ever. Until 1pm in the afternoon. May the 4th be with you !!!!!

Interesting list of bits from Dave 'Gomi' Bos*:

I thought I write this to save us hashers some money here and there. These are links I use a lot to save me £100's a year on bills and get cashback on my weekly shopping.

Insurance companies up to £80 cashback for just renewing your policy online. Have a look as lots of shops are linked through this site. over the year I get about £500 back on my shopping via this site. Free money as far as I am can see.

<http://www.hotukdeals.com/index.php> Look in there vouchers corner for vouchers for lots of well known brands and shops that are used by most of us. Nice discounts can be found on this site.

(Must be a 'man' thing!?)

Ah, T!t Monday. It's not that far off now, that glorious day when, heading into work on the bus, or walking to the Tube, or sitting on the train, you find yourself suddenly chirpier than you have been in months.

You find yourself smiling at strangers again. There is a mild involuntary tumescence in your trousers that comes and goes throughout the morning with the comforting regularity of a heartbeat.

And then you get a text around lunchtime from a mate which says: "At last, T!t Monday!" And you instantly understand why you are so happy. For T!t Monday is that special day in the year when, for the first time, the temperature rises above that magical point which causes girls getting dressed in the morning to decide to show a bit of skin.

After months of dull colours and chunky knit, the world's birds suddenly dive into last summer's wardrobe (they've not had chance to buy this season's stuff) and chuck it on without a thought. Your urban landscape is suddenly lightened with acres of naked arm and leg and, after many dark months of burrowing, breasts rising to the surface like moles at dusk.

Big breasts in white work shirts straining at the buttons. Small breasts braless in vest tops, the nipples frothed by ribby fabrics. Breasts in summer dresses bouncing in the distance so that they catch your eye before you even notice there is someone wearing them. Breasts nudging out from the crowd at traffic islands, quivering to cross the road...

And you know it is nearly summer. For previous generations, the arrival of spring was heralded by the sound of the first cuckoo. For us, it is T!t Monday.

Not that it always falls on a Monday. Like Easter, T!t Monday is a moveable feast. Last year it fell on a Friday. Friday 29 April, to be precise, when temperatures maxed out at 22.1C after nothing much above 16C all year. It last fell on a Monday in 2004, when temperatures leapt to 22C on 24 April.

And then, of course, there is T!t Monday Night. You see, in early summer, temperatures drop off very dramatically when night falls (T!t Friday 2005 dropped away to a parky 11.8C). But the dollies are not prepared. Slightly stunned by the morning heat, they drag out the summer clothes but forget to bring a cardie (a mistake they will not make again until next year), so that when they're all standing outside All Bar One after work celebrating the arrival of spring, their barely covered nipples have no protection from the cold. It's like a Bring-and-Buy sale where everyone has brought hat pegs. It's like a prog-rock gig where, instead of lighters, everyone is holding up nipples.

So when will T!t Monday fall this year? Will you be the first to text your mates with the announcement? Do not shoot your bolt too early.

There will be false starts. You will smell fresh cut grass and see a couple of early starters and feel compelled to declare T!t Monday. But your more level-headed friends will tell you to hold your horses, keep your powder dry, don't fire until you see the whites of their bra straps

As the poet said: one bold Northern slapper in a bikini doth not a summer make.

From Pete: After the Great Britain Beer Festival, in London, all the brewery top brass decided to go out for a beer. The guy from Corona sits down and says, "Hey Senor, I would like the world's best beer, a Corona." The bartender dusts off a bottle from the shelf and gives it to him. The guy from Budweiser says, "I'd like the best beer in the world, give me 'The King Of Beers', a Budweiser." The bartender gives him one. The guy from Coors says, "I'd like the only beer made with Rocky Mountain spring water, give me a Coors." He gets it. The guy from Harveys sits down and says, "Give me a Coke." The bartender is a little taken aback, but gives him what he ordered. The other brewery directors look over at him and ask "Why aren't you drinking Harveys?" and the Harveys director replies, "Well, I figured if you guys aren't drinking beer, neither would I."

Why you should limit your running to the Hash to avoid stress

Way, way back in the yesterday of yon, man sought to eke out his pitiful existence among the prehistoric rocks of the world. Whilst rummaging among the rubble for a bit of scrumptious sustenance, it was quite possible that, in turning the corner of a large boulder, he would meet something unexpected and potentially dangerous, like a saber-tooth tiger, a woolly mammoth, or his mother-in-law. All, or any, of these could have produced a life saving mechanism in the human body known as “acute stress response” or the Fight or Flight response.

The acute stress response is the body's way of instantly preparing to react to a perceived or real threat. Whether it's to attack the source of fear, or to run from it, the body leaps into this mode. Walter Cannon, a life-long friend of Ivan Pavlov (of Pavlov's dog fame), was one of the first to study this reaction. He proposed it was hard-wired into us. The key difference was if the surprise stimuli caused a reaction of fear or anger. Fear would result in flight, while anger would result in fight.

The brain's hypothalamus reacts to this stimuli by triggering the release of several chemicals into the bloodstream; adrenaline (Cannon's hormone of fight or flight), noradrenaline, and cortisol. Respiration increases and the heart starts pumping two or three times faster providing oxygen rich blood to the limbs, eyes dilate increasing sight, hearing is increased, capillaries close increasing blood pressure to allow one to live even if wounded. Unnecessary functions like digestion and sexual function are terminated to provide blood to other parts. The brain fires signals faster making you more alert and responsive. Unfortunately, the body also may release bladder and bowel control to make you lighter.

In seconds the body is a well-oiled reactionary machine and is ready for whatever comes next. This state of heightened function expends a huge amount of energy and can't be sustained for long. In addition, long term exposure to stress hormones is not good for us.

So although we have moved several million years away from the cave, the response remains. Remember how you felt when your mum caught you with your hand in the cookie jar? Or after that near miss on the freeway? What about people lifting a car off a loved one in a panic?

It's not all good however. Your body can have such a response when doing things like talking to your boss or going out on date. Too much of the wrong stimuli can be a bad thing causing heart disease, sexual dysfunction, high blood pressure, and immune deficiencies. A short while ago, DamnInteresting.com produced an article on The Jumping Frenchman of Maine Disorder which causes a different response to stress, like convulsions.

Although exercise is a well-known way to reduce stress, a new report by Princeton University says that running alone can ADD to stress. The study concluded that running causes the release of corticosterone— a stress managing hormone— into the brain, which inhibits the growth of more brain cells. On the flip side, running increases our special orientation and neuron communication. The study tested rats running alone and in groups and concluded that running in groups decreased the adverse effects. Maybe it's another hard wired response making it safer to flee in groups?

A Harvard cardiologist, Herbert Benson, has developed a theory to combat the fight or flight response when unnecessary by producing a relaxation response, that is, causing the body to release neurochemicals to counteract the others. Dr. Benson believes that the relaxation response is as hard wired as the acute stress response and therefore is as easy to trigger.

The simplest way to trigger it is thus:

1. Focus on a word or phrase that has a positive meaning to you. Such words as "one," "love" and "peace" work well.
2. When you find your mind has wandered or you notice any intrusive thoughts entering your mind, simply disregard them and return your focus to the word or phrase you chose.

Dr. Benson recommends practicing this for 10-15 minutes twice a day. The benefits are lower blood pressure, reduced stress, tranquility, etc. You can further this by repeating your relaxation word while exercising, yoga, deep breathing, progressive muscle relaxation, meditation, singing or chanting your word, etc.

It's a fine line to walk. I want to keep my quick responses for the next time I meet a 10-foot angry prehistoric sloth, but I also don't want to wet myself the next time I go on a date. Maybe I should stop dating 10-foot angry prehistoric sloths.

For a long life 9 out of 10 doctors recommend vitamins, exercise, and relaxation. The 10th recommends hashing and beer!

A bit more beer and stuff..

After last years Beachy Head marathon, and the obligatory BBFRC post-run (actually, increasingly instead of...) champagne, and a few dozen pints in the Pilot, a select few of us Shorehamites were tipped out at the Lazy Toad to rectify the thirst brought about by the long trip home from Eastbourne. Who do we find propping up the bar but Humper aka Pete Halliday, hasher from Wales, Tulsa* and Germany, and also the man behind the Evening Star and the Dark Star brewery. He wouldn't say back then which, but the purpose of his visit was to seal the deal on buying a Shoreham pub which we later discovered was the Duke of Wellington.

The Duke is now open with new landlords Roy, and Pat ex of CAMRA pub of the year several times, the Stanley Arms in Portslade, after years of boarded up dereliction during which, I only recently found out, it had remained open throughout. Already it's built up a reputation for great beer and great live music and the rejuvenation has yet to get underway in earnest.

Meanwhile Aileen tells me a little anecdote about a friend of theirs who, discovering that the This is Shoreham website was holding a best pub in Shoreham poll a year or so ago, persuaded all his mates to vote for the dilapidated Duke. The joke took off and it won the vote easily, prompting me to wonder if Pete used the website to identify the peoples favourite, and buy accordingly. It was probably just that it came up for sale at the right time but I like the story!

Discovered the letter on the right in the Good Motoring (GEM) magazine and thought "hasher" all the way through. Amazed to recognize the name of an old mate of mine who has actually run with us on 3 or 4 occasions! Well done Pete, a clear understanding of "PC" comment there!

BOUNCER

* RIP Gene Pitney. Apparently, it will take 3 weeks to make a coffin from oak for Gene Pitney, but only 24 hours from balsa. The marriage to Whitney Houston is off so we'll never see her as Whitney Pitney.

I never quite figured out why the sexual urges of men and women differ so much. And I never have figured out the whole Venus and Mars thing. I have never figured out why men think with their head and women with their heart. FOR EXAMPLE: One evening last week, my girlfriend and I were getting into bed. Well, the passion starts to heat up, and she eventually says "I don't feel like it, I just want you to hold me." I said "WHAT?!! What was that?!" So she says the words that every boyfriend on the planet dreads to hear... "You're just not in touch with my emotional needs as a woman enough for me to satisfy your physical needs as a man." She responded to my puzzled look by saying, "Can't you just love me for who I am and not what I do for you in the bedroom?" Realizing that nothing was going to happen that night, I went to sleep.

The very next day I opted to take the day off of work to spend time with her. We went out to a nice lunch and then went shopping at a big, big unnamed department store. I walked around with her while she tried on several different very expensive outfits. She couldn't decide which one to take so I told her we'd just buy them all. She wanted new shoes to compliment her new clothes, so I said lets get a pair for each outfit. We went onto the jewellery department where she picked out a pair of diamond earrings. Let me tell you...she was so excited. She must have thought I was one wave short of a shipwreck. I started to think she was testing me because she asked for a tennis bracelet when she doesn't even know how to play tennis.

I think I threw her for a loop when I said, "That's fine, honey." She was almost nearing sexual satisfaction from all of the excitement. Smiling with excited anticipation she finally said, "I think this is all dear, let's go to the cashier."

I could hardly contain myself when I blurted out, "No honey, I don't feel like it."

I then said "honey! I just want you to HOLD this stuff for a while. You're just not in touch with my financial needs as a man enough for me to satisfy your shopping needs as a woman."

And just when she had this look like she was going to kill me, I added, "Why can't you just love me for who I am and not for the things I buy you?"

Apparently I'm not having sex tonight either....but at least that bitch knows I'm smarter than her

ROAD SAFETY BILL

While I agree with your comments in your recent editorial about stiffer penalties for serious motoring offences and especially for use of mobile phones when driving, I cannot support your call for a cut in the drink/drive limit.

Much like the anti-smoking brigade consists totally of non-smokers, the lobby that wants to cut the drink/drive limit consists totally of people who would not be damaged by the change - i.e. people that drink little or nothing or have a superb pub on their doorstep. The fact is that the majority of lives lost through drink-driving are caused by people who flout the current law - not by people who have two pints rather than half of shandy. No competent driver who is used to alcohol is going to become a bad driver after a couple of pints - the incompetent driver who is sober or a driver distracted by using a mobile phone is far more dangerous and why should the competent majority have to pay for the incompetent few?

In my view the fabric of life in this country has considerably deteriorated over the last 20 years or so. We are cursed with absurdly materialistic values, pester power, increased crime, indiscipline of youth, vandalism, graffiti, exorbitant house prices and a culture of long working hours. However, our country pubs are one of the things that still makes Britain great. Please don't destroy them with this ill-thought idea.

HARE'S MOTTO:- TO OUR QUEER OLD DEAN

Congratulations to her Madge on reaching such a huge age. No sign of her stopping yet so the jokes on Charlie boy, makes you laugh don't it! Here's a bit of advice in case you bump into any of the nobs on one of the walkabouts.

What Not To Say To The Royal Family

'Miss', 'you there', 'sod it', 'piss off', 'bottom', 'piss-artist', 'fuck it', 'can't you bloody read you dyslectic prat', 'masturbation', 'Spick', 'get your lips around this one Princess ho ho ho', 'So why did you come to Sussex?' NEVER touch the Royal Family under any circumstances, unless you yourself have been touched by them and even then keep your hands well above the waist.

NEVER ever ever offer the Queen a Mars bar. The correct way to address the Royal Family is 'Your Majesty' or 'Your Highness' and not 'Hello Lizzie' or 'How's yer doing Spiros?'.

NEVER ask the Royal Family a direct question. For instance should you be lost and wish to ask the Queen where the trail is, you must say 'The trail is near here?', and hope she will say: 'No I think you are wrong, it's over half a mile away down by the golf course' or: 'Yes it's near here. There it is'

NEVER shout abuse or push or jostle the Royal Family, unless they attack you, hit you with golf clubs or rub out the trail marks.

NEVER try and tell them a joke as they won't understand. The Queen being of German decent is totally devoid of humour and the Prince only permits the two Greek jokes at court, neither of which is funny.

The Hash Rules of Etiquette

This page is designed to help out Hashers visiting the Royal Residencies this year when you feel awkward or embarrassed about the right kind of behaviour on meeting any member of The British Royal Family.

What To Do On Meeting The Royal Family

This depends largely on where you meet them. If you should meet a member of the Royal Family in the local pub in normal circumstances the etiquette is clear and simple. If you are wearing a hat or Hash head band remove it instantly and hold it in your left hand leaving your right hand free should the Royal Personage decide on manual contact.

Getting down on one knee would be appreciated, but in a crowded supermarket this could cause a great deal of congestion and end up with you getting kicked over.

However should you meet any member of the Royal Family in a surgical supply shop, it is best not to acknowledge them at all as this will only lead to embarrassment on your part, and on the part of the Royal person or persons. The same applies in garages, betting shops, private cinema clubs, the underground and public toilets.

A typical conversation with the Queen

QUEEN: Arise

HASHER: Thank you your Majesty.

QUEEN: What brings you to XYZ?

HASHER: I have a friend who lives near here - well blah blah blah actually, he organised this hash run for a bunch of boozy- (you will have lost the Queen's attention by now as she meets many people and finds them most boring)

QUEEN: Well I must be going now.

HASHER: Goodbye your Majesty.'

QUEEN: Goodbye pleb.

A bad conversation with the Queen

HASHER: Hello, I didn't reconize you.

QUEEN: But I am the Queen of Great Britain, Europe, the United States and the Commonwealth.

HASHER: Well Doris, you don't look at all like you do on the stamps.

QUEEN: Don't speak to me like that you dirty little nonentity.

HASHER: Can you help me scrape this corgi shit of my running shoes?

Question: What was the height of globalization? Answer: Princess Diana's death. Question: How come?

Answer: An ENGLISH princess with an EGYPTIAN boyfriend crashes in a FRENCH tunnel, driving a GERMAN car with a DUTCH engine, driven by a BELGIAN who was high on SCOTTISH whiskey, followed closely by ITALIAN Paparazzi, on JAPANESE motorcycles, treated by an AMERICAN doctor, using BRAZILIAN medicines!

And this was started by a MALAYSIAN, using Bill Gates' technology which he stole from the JAPANESE.

And you are probably reading this on one of the IBM clones that use TAIWANESE-made chips, and KOREAN made monitors, assembled by INDIAN workers in a SINGAPORE plant, transported by lorries driven by THAIS, hijacked by INDONESIANS and finally sold to you by CHINAMEN! Globalisation!

Dear Sir,

Our Head Coach, Mr Sven-Göran Ericsson, has asked me, on the eve of our departure to Germany for the World Cup Finals, for which we have qualified, to ask our fellow Home Nations to come to our assistance so that England may be 100% sure of winning the World Cup.

As you are no doubt aware from the winning of the Rugby World Cup and the Ashes, England's success boosts all British nations and we know how you all enjoyed basking in the reflected glory which bonds our ancient nations together.

To this end, we request and require that you furnish, forthwith, any information, which may aid us on our quest. We don't expect to need it, you understand, but one never knows.

What we have in mind is tactical appraisals of our opponents, whom you may have encountered whilst failing to qualify yourselves. Foreign styles of play, underhand methods of influencing the referee, latin diving, teutonic bullying, you know the sort of thing. Also, if there is any advice of the legality of two apparently separate islands in the Carribean forming a joint enterprise for the express purpose of winning a soccer match. In the capital here we find it quite extraordinary!

I know well you all take delight in the support of England whenever any of you manage a shock result and am sure of the same fullsome support from you chaps in this instance.

You remain, hopefully, our humble servants

Dear Mr Barwick,

Thank you for your interesting and brilliant letter. As you know we are your nearest neighbours, and sharing a long border with you, know you more intimately and therefore love you more intimately than anybody else. How we enjoyed your Rugby victory! Bonfires were lit in remote areas all over rural Wales in celebration.

As you no doubt don't know, all correspondence from Lloedr is translated from Saes to Cymraeg in accordance with the Rules of our Association. I had your brave letter translated and passed it to Dafydd ab Sylwtlyhatesinglish hew is hedd of our tactical spying unit.

I am sorry to have to tell you that there was a cock up in the translation which meant that Dafydd, completely by accident, got the whole thing arseways and provided all your opponents with a dossier on your players instead. In particular, I have to warn you that your manager may be targeted by dusky beauties who may give him the bends while he goes diving as it were. Also watch out for Paraguayan grannies in the vicinity of your only hope.

As ever, if there is anything else we can do for you, do not hesitate to ask.

Ah Brian how's it going

All the lads here wish ye the very best in the World Cup. Sure don't ye know that?

We always want England to do well. There has been too much old guff about history and bad blood and we should forget about all that. We have anyhow.

I mean, nowadays who is interested in Pope Adrian (the only English Pope) blessing the English invasion which took all our lands and divided it up amongst the English? Who wants to know about Cromwell putting the women and children of Drogheda and Wexford to the sword; the Penal Laws that outlawed the one true Catholic faith and the outlawing of the beloved Gaelic language. The crushing of the brave rebels in 1118, 1250, 1336, 1388 1542, 1612. 1798, 1848, 1916. Sure we have forgotten all about the Famine, where one million of us were starved to death, skin and bone with grass stain about our hungry mouths with pestilence rapine and disease stalking every corner of the land whilst our young men fought in the front lines of the trenches of your imperial wars.

Having forgotten all that, and the unfinished business in a corner of our land, we would of course be delighted to support England, and we will. However, you must be aware of our longstanding emigrant links with seamus insert name of whoever the bastards are playing and so therefore, on this one occasion, our loyalties may be somewhat divided.

As a favour Brian: - my daughter is a big Man U fan and could you send over young Wayne's birth cert (and his folks) so she can send him a birthday card?

Description \(revised\)

Up for auction is my wife's box. I'm selling her box because my cock won't fit in her box. I wanted to try and put my cock in her box before we got married, but she would not allow it. Now I find out my cock doesn't fit in it, and as you can see in the picture if I shove my cock any further in I will tear her box, and she doesn't want that. So I am selling her box and looking for one that my cock will fit in. Thank you for looking. My cock is only pictured as reference and not included with her box. I have tried to get rid of her box several times, she gave her box to the neighbor twice, but he returned it. She tried giving it to the mailman, but he said he rather have my cock. We even tried to give it away by putting a flyer on the church bulletin board, but it was taken down for some reason. So I am at wit's end to try and get rid of this thing, please help! Shipping will be determined at end of auction, actual cost at most!

Q: Wazup G, MC_Ake here, I was wondering if UR wife's box can be used to store my ghetto-blasters? A: Assumind that your ghetto-blasters is small enough.	Mar-29-06
Q: How heavy is your wifes box? I wouldnt want it falling over and breaking my cock in half. A: Her box is VERY light, less than a pound!	Mar-29-06
Q: Does this box have any bad odeurs we should know about? I'd hate for my cock to smell. A: She has kept her box maintained very well, in fact I would say it smells Spring time fresh!	Mar-29-06
Q: Has this box had anything other than a cock inside it or has it been used with any other items, including kitchen utensils and various vegetables A: As far as I know other than the failed attempts of my cock the only other thing that's been in her box is a candle.	Mar-29-06
Q: how much is s/h to boca raton, fl 33431? by the way i love you A: Priority mail is $4.05 to any of the lower 48. I love you too, but I do feel I need to see other people.	Mar-29-06

Q: Thanks for your earlier reply. The photos do not show the interior of the box, if you can assure me there are no signs of rot I may well be interested. Thanks for your time.	Mar-29-06
A: Her box does not show signs of rot at all.
Q: my cock is very messy. Would you say yor wifes box would contain this mess or does it leak	Mar-29-06
A: I would have to say I have not tried storing anything in her box. I would suggest not storing liquids in her box.
Q: im flying over to Wisconsin soon with my cock. Would it be possible to try to see if it will fit in your wifes box before i buy	Mar-29-06
A: I don't see any harm in that.
Q: Will you be putting your wife's can for sale? I do rather like the sound of it.	Mar-29-06
A: I might. or I might just ship her can with her box, you never know!
Q: I'm very dubious about paying good money for what amounts to a second hand box. Has it had a lot of wear and tear? Also are all the folding flaps still firmly attached? Thanks.	Mar-29-06
A: As you can see from the pictures, her box is in nice shape and yes the flaps are firmly attached.
Q: English. The flaps of your wifes box look ok in the picture. Can you tell me if they all tuck in properly when its closed or are the a bit tatty	Mar-29-06
A: All flaps on her box are in great shape and fold nicely.
Q: English again! If i am the winning bidder and you ship your wifes box to the UK how will it be packaged. I would hate for it to get damaged or abused on its way to me or i should find that some one else has been inside your wifes box as my cock is particular where he goes	Mar-29-06
A: Her box will be packed tight, for whoever wins it.
Q: Hi its english again. The dimensions you gave me of your wifes box are quite tight and i also think my cock will be too big. However i have a couple of friends who both have small cocks so do you think your wifes box could accomodate 2 smaller cocks?	Mar-29-06
A: I don't see that being a problem, as long as they are small enough cocks.
Q: Perhaps you can try putting your cock in to the box when it isnt excited?	Mar-29-06
A: As you can see by the picture my cock is pretty stiff. I have never known it to get any softer.
Q: Can you confirm this box is her front box or her dirt box?	Mar-29-06
A: As far as I can tell there is no dirt in her box, and I beleive there has never been any in there.
Q: how big is your cock? i have a 10 inch one and i was wondering if i can fit mine is that box... otherwise i would have to keep looking for something bigger.....	Mar-29-06
A: My cock is about 30 inches, around and about 9 inches at the base and about 6 inches at the head.
Q: Do you ship to the UK at all? Our boxes over here don't tend to be as nice as the way your one looks?	Mar-29-06
A: Shipping to the UK will be about $4.10 US for economy.
Q: Hi, Please can you send me the measurements both internal and exteral of the box.. I also have a cock i would like to try and fit in the box. Any help would be much appreachated. Cheers.	Mar-29-06
A: It measures about 6 inches tall and 4 3/4 both wide and deep, give or take a little. These are outside measurements.
Q: Looking at the picture, it seems like your cock might just about fit in your wife's box - it's the foliage at the bottom that is really getting in the way! Why don't you try trimming the bush around the base of your cock?	Mar-29-06
A: It's an optical illusion, and besides who puts a cock in bush first? When trying the proper way my cock will not go in past the head.
Q: I don't think you can legally sell your wife's box. Only she can sell it.	Mar-29-06
A: Actually I can, we both own it and she gave me permission.
Q: Hi. I am interested in your wifes box. I am in England. We have chickens here not cocks. My girlfriends box is the right sized for my chicken but i chocked my chicken last night and am thinking of gettin a bigger cock. Can you give me the dimensions of your wifes box so i know what size cock i need to fit it. Also would you ship your wifes box to the uk and how much would your wifes box cost to ship?	Mar-29-06
A: Her box measures about 6 inches tall and 4 3/4 inches deep and wide. To ship it to the UK would be about $4.10 for economy.
Q: hey try putting some lubricant/vaseline all around the inside of box, ur cock may slip in a lot easier i think.	Mar-29-06
A: We have thought of this, however it would make quite a mess of her box.
Q: is there any other holes like around the back where you can get your wife drunk and then stick your cock in ?	Mar-29-06
A: Interesting suggestion. She does also have a can that I've tried to put my cock in, but after a while it became tiring for both of us.
Q: If you have only tried to use it once, and it would not fit, you may not be doing it right. A good cock packer would know that the box must be prepared correctly or damage may occur. I wouldn't want you to find another box that fit too loosely and then want your wife's box back, after I have paid for it.	Mar-28-06
A: Anyone can obviously see that the only way for my cock to fit would be to fold it, as her box will only stretch so far. Folding my cock will only end up in mt cock being split and I do not want that. I like my cock just the way it is. Thank you
Q: Would you consider putting your cock up for auction as well? I'm really as interested in your cock as I am in your wife's box... and to be able to have both at the same time would be terrific.	Mar-28-06
A: I don't know, I'm pretty attached to my cock, have been for years, but I guess if the price was right I might part with it.
Q: how fresh it the box? I mean does it smell at all? I'd hate to get working on your wife's box, if your cock made a mess in it trying to get in.	Mar-27-06
A: Actually her box is in pretty good shape, I only tried to put my cock in it once before I took the picture. She has kept it maintained very well, in fact I would say it smells Spring time fresh!

GURKHAS KEEP PEACE AT IKEA

By Amy Iggulden

(Filed: 17/04/2006)

Some of the toughest fighters in the British Army have been drafted in to control one of the most frightening situations on civvy street: hordes of bank holiday shoppers at Ikea. The four former Gurkhas have kept the peace in the Falklands, Belize and on the border between Hong Kong and China. But they had never seen anything quite like the notoriously temperamental crowds found at a flatpack furniture store. Two weeks into their assignment, the team of highly disciplined Nepalese soldiers is rising to the challenge and has already eradicated car park crime at the store where they are working.

Lal Bahadur Gurung, 44, a retired colour sergeant with 2nd Bn the Royal Gurkha Rifles, said: "I have never seen anything like it anywhere and I have been on operational tours all over the world, mainly peacekeeping. "But I am still finding the crowds very nice."

The former sergeant is one of 20 ex-soldiers who came to Britain last month to join a security firm that supplies Ikea Nottingham with its protection force.

David Attle, a duty supervisor for security at the store, said: "I was quite astonished when I heard we were getting Gurkhas but so far it is working out very well.

"They seem to have wiped out car crime in the car park."

The men are among the first retired Gurkhas to work in Britain after a change in immigration laws allowed them to remain in the country.

Ikea flushes out apology for toilet humour

Wed, May 08 2002

The figure, incorrectly identified as the Hindu god Shiva, appeared in a section with decoration tips in the latest issue of Ikea Family Magazine, sent to 700,000 households in Sweden.

Many of the estimated 10,000 Hindus in the Scandinavian country complained and representatives from Hindu groups sent a joint protest letter to the company. Ikea apologised soon after.

The article, headlined 'Make the nicest toilet seat yourself', features a picture of Buddha, with legs crossed and eyes closed, glued on a toilet seat spray-painted in gold.

Mr Ashok Dhawan, chairman of the Hindu temple in Stockholm, said he threw away his Ikea membership card after he saw the article.

'When I saw the picture, I first thought, 'how good that they print this picture'. Then I saw it was a toilet seat. I became furious," he said.

Protest organiser Shahsi Sharma said he was satisfied with the apology and considered the issue resolved.

Ikea spokesman Tina Paulsson said the company would pay closer attention to pictures with religious and cultural motifs in the future.

Said the company: 'We have unfortunately not been sufficiently attentive to this picture and its symbolism and meaning for a lot of people.'

Ikea, founded in 1943, has more than 140 stores with 70,000 employees in 22 countries.

Q: How many IKEA shop assistants does it take to change a light bulb?

A: "Sorry, we ran out of light bulb stock. We expect it to arrive early next month. We do have ladders though! You just go straight on, then left and then right. No, thanks, anytime."

Q: How many Dixons assistants does it take to change a lightbulb?

A: Err. Nahh, it's MEANT to go dark after a few weeks. It's a new fangled addition. It's been developed by, er, (etc...)
