IT'S HASHING JIM, BUT NOT AS WE KNOW IT!

We are running again but please book by following the link below to the Google sheet on the website:
https://docs.google.com/spreadsheets/d/16xT64sM2yOaa0u6-CokEEGrSfFrhcUWQb_ZLknIqB1w/edit#gid=0 and selecting your hash name from the drop-down list on your preferred run time. If not there, please add your name manually but you may be asked for details for contact tracing purposes.

For a better booking experience on mobile and tablet devices please download Google Sheets from the Google Play Store or the Apple App Store first.

Please note we all need to confirm that we have self-assessed for Covid-19 symptoms and that we have not been asked to self-isolate for any reason. Please mark on the spreadsheet that you have completed this task.

Please also follow the rules as outlined previously: Turn up before your allotted set-off time (and if you arrive too early please stay in your vehicle until the previous 'pod' has set-off); Look out for others in your pod and stay together after each check, i.e. if you find the trail work your way back to the check, gather, & move on (and please don't leave anyone behind); Don't mark the checks through so that others in later pods get the same hashing experience; Bring your own drinks, tankards and chairs if requested and stay in your pods (socially distanced of course) or enjoy a pub beer in their garden in your pods.

Read the comments on the booking spreadsheet for any additional instructions/guidance for that run.

Thought for the day:

Anyone else find it odd that on Star Trek when they "boldy go where no one has gone before" they always end up meeting someone?

BEERBELLY TRAP and why the girls get all the page three space!

Bergedorfer beer nails the post-lockdown look in their ads, prompting copy cat pictures:

Meanwhile, identify with this suckers, and the shops examine reopening fashion:

back on track over Folders Lane and on inn through the back gate. Just Jacqui had received a bit of an education in marking and calling, learning as she went having only walked previously, but Trouble might have saved herself some trouble if she'd actually read the chalk talk and taken on board that pink was walkers, although she somehow shifted blame on to Fukarwe who was blindly following until they ran into the lead pod on the way in as they were heading out! Simple fare of sossage-inna-bun was on offer washed down with Downlands ale, and a very pleasant evening ensued as the pods returned each with their own stories. An unexpected call was made from Ride-It, Baby, in an excitable mood having already requested a reduction from Local Knowledge on her sausage thanks to the Eat Out To Help Out scheme, who decided we should have a circle up as we were in a private garden. Motivating everyone into filling their tankards and spreading widely round the garden, a somewhat unprepared RA suggested, a Mexican hash wave while we gathered, before waffling on about unprecedented times, thanking those who've helped keep us sane during lockdown, those who've kick-started things to get us up and running again (a special mention going to Rainbow Balls who turned up for a Haywards Heath microhash so bladdered on his birthday that he had to bale out early doors), and finally to Local Knowledge and Lily the Pink for the activities tonight. Downers were awarded from their own cups to LTP for the trail and to Ann Walker, who hadn't previously met the lifting bar on the stiles so got close to decapitation when Trouble let go as she was crossing. With an appropriate nod to the hash chant (given that we aren't supposed to be singing at the moment so RA had instructed us to chant the words), of "Head? Who said head? I'll have some of that", the suggestion of Anne Boleyn was overridden in favour of "Off With Her Head". Keeps It Up then gave meticulous directions on locating the car park for next weeks Chailey trail and Trouble was elected Covid officer in view of her experience with compliance at work. Another great pod hash!

Many thanks to I Need One (Needy) from the CRAP hash/ Worth Way runners 6.30 pod for the photography!

You may have seen headlines suggesting that breweries were pouring thousands of gallons down the drain due to the pub closures, and their own lack of imagination. May I present Prince Crashpian's solution:

Hi Bouncer, Too much time to think! I have come up with an amazing idea Have you heard they are now having to pour away beer!!!! I have come up with a campaign its called CAMRA "Campaign for Releasing Ale". Do you think it will catch on. Furniture manufacturers must go over to making stillage racks and send one to every home. Brewers will deliver a barrel to all those who request one! Sounds like a plan to me, shall we lobby the breweries to get it started. What do you think? Am I mad or what?

On On, Prince Crashpian

I might have a slight drinking problem. My husband asked me to toast some bread, so I raised my wine glass and said, "To bread!"

hindsight perhaps we should have kicked the checks as we were the final group but rules is rules, and how were we to know he was going to turn up late after failing to locate the car parks but decide to go anyway? Despite Shoots Off Early's assertion that this was only a little common, we couldn't get lost and it was going to be a short hash, it turned out to be a long hash over a large area on which we managed to get lost. Only marginally admittedly, as we followed a mostly anti-clockwise journey over three areas criss-crossing the roads and passing the windmill a couple of times, but you have to laugh! Free-range cattle caused a bit of fun, particularly for the CRAP hash pod who adjusted the usual 'petrol' call to 'beef', while Roaming Pussy recalled driving through the common one night to find them relaxing in the middle of the road! The rope swing also caused some mirth, poor old NickO receiving a whack which he said will be embarrassing with the grand kids who play there frequently! At the on-inn we found the hares had set up a table of lovely veggie comestibles to be washed down with Downlands beer as we again enjoyed a socially distanced get together. With Lily the Pink producing the Numpty mug, Ride-It, Baby again called a circle up so I attempted to get everyone doing 'lean forwards lean backwards' before Wildbush and Keeps It Up were duly downed. Fukarwe followed rapidly, after his misbehaviour of the last three weeks being the obvious recipient of the mug, and had started walking in even before the vote. In its box, Lily the Pink assured us that it hadn't been touched by human hands since it went through the glass washer at the Royal Oak on our last proper hash before lockdown, while at the same time admitting that he'd awarded it to Elle on one of his household hashes! The so far unnamed Jasmine, who Sticky Balls had earlier described as "runs like a Duracell bunny", had made a class comment along the lines of "I don't know what my husband will think when I tell him I've been swinging in the woods". The first suggestion of "Goes Like a Rabbit" polled no votes at all. Zero, Nada, Zilch. So it's a good job that the other suggestion of Little Swinger was well received, and so with a reminder of the questions from One Erection (which itself demonstrates how many brain cells we've lost since lockdown as she wasn't actually a virgin!), she found herself named, while the RA was admonished for constantly trying to sing. Another great pod hash!

A group of people, mostly wearing bright green and blue athletic gear, are gathered in a circle on a grassy field at dusk. They appear to be participating in a group exercise or dance, with some individuals in motion and others standing still. The background shows a line of trees and a sky with soft, colorful light from the setting or rising sun.

ELLENA CRUSE Friday 24 July 2020 18:22

Perhaps incorrectly interpreting the Government's latest coronavirus advice, he made sure to wear a blue covering but positioned it in the wrong place while walking along Oxford Street. Some pedestrians stopped in their tracks to take photos of the man while others gaped in shock. It was unclear what prompted the stunt but his walk was captured by a Reuters photographer from an office above the street. It comes as face masks were made compulsory in shops, takeaways and banks from today, in addition to on public transport, to battle the spread of Covid-19. People buying a takeaway coffee are among those required by law to wear a face-covering. However, some high street chains have said they will not penalise customers who fail to do so. Police can hand out £100 fines to people in shops, shopping centres, banks, takeaway outlets, post offices, sandwich shops and supermarkets who flout the rules. However, the College of Policing has said officers "should only be required as a last resort".

Planning a vacation in the USA be like

Terrible Maps
April 15, 2019

Central and south America according to Fox news

From Charles Pierce, in Esquire:

"In my life, I have watched John Kennedy talk on television about missiles in Cuba. I saw Lyndon Johnson look Richard Russell squarely in the eye and say, "And we shall overcome." I saw Richard Nixon resign and Gerald Ford tell the Congress that our long national nightmare was over. I saw Jimmy Carter talk about malaise and Ronald Reagan talk about a shining city on a hill. I saw George H.W. Bush deliver the eulogy for the Soviet bloc, and Bill Clinton comfort the survivors of Timothy McVeigh's madness in Oklahoma City. I saw George W. Bush struggle to make sense of it all on September 11, 2001, and I saw Barack Obama sing 'Amazing Grace' in the wounded sanctuary of Mother Emanuel Church in Charleston, South Carolina.

"These were the presidents of my lifetime. These were not perfect men. They were not perfect presidents, god knows. Not one of them was that. But they approached the job, and they took to the podium, with all the gravitas they could muster as appropriate to the job. They tried, at least, to reach for something in the presidency that was beyond their grasp as ordinary human beings. They were not all ennobled by the attempt, but they tried nonetheless.

"And comes now this hopeless, vicious buffoon, and the audience of equally hopeless and vicious buffoons who laughed and cheered when he made sport of a woman whose lasting memory of the trauma she suffered is the laughter of the perpetrators. Now he comes, a man swathed in scandal, with no interest beyond what he can put in his pocket and what he can put over on a universe of suckers, and he does something like this while occupying an office that we gave him, and while endowed with a public trust that he dishonors every day he wakes up in the White House.

"The scion of a multigenerational criminal enterprise, the parameters of which we are only now beginning to comprehend. A vessel for all the worst elements of the American condition. And a cheap, soulless bully besides. We never have had such a cheap counterfeit of a president* as currently occupies the office. We never have had a president* so completely deserving of scorn and yet so small in the office that it almost seems a waste of time and energy to summon up the requisite contempt.

"Watch how a republic dies in the empty eyes of an empty man who feels nothing but his own imaginary greatness, and who cannot find in himself the decency simply to shut up even when it is in his best interest to do so. Presidents don't have to be heroes to be good presidents. They just have to realize that their humanity is our common humanity, and that their political commonwealth is our political commonwealth, too.

Watch him behind the seal of the President of the United States. Isn't he a funny man? Isn't what happened to that lady hilarious? Watch the assembled morons cheer. This is the only story now."

The bottom line: 3 dogs were in a cage at the city pound: A Pit Bull, a German Shepherd and a Great Dane. The Pit Bull told the others "I was eating my dinner and my owner's two year old niece tried to grab my food, so I ripped out her throat. Now they are going to put me to sleep." The German Shepherd said "I chewed up my master's shoes yesterday and now they are going to put me to sleep." The Great Dane said "My master is a beautiful twenty two year old woman. The other day she came out of the shower and bent over in front of me, so I mounted her." "So are you in here to be put to sleep too?" asked the others. "No, I'm here to get my nails clipped."
